OLD ETIQUETTE BOOK

IS MISFIT FOR THIS

"COMFORT-FIRST" AGE

"Single ladies do not, in this day, take the arm of a gentleman unless they are willing to acknowledge an engagement." So says an old and interesting volume entitled "Manners, Culture and Dress," which rests, dusty and unmolested, on a shelf in the Columbia Public Library.

Some startling commandments does this book lay down, starting in view of present customs among Columbia students. One is admonished to treat him who has come to hold one in unwonted esteem, "honorably and humanely, as you would hope to be used, with generosity by the person who may engage your own heart."

This is applicable to the co-ed coquette. To this young man whose lady friend lives in a house where S. G. A. rules are carefully observed, one feels inclined to quote the following, "Very few men comprehend the real pain and inconvenience they occasion to the lady of their choice when they keep her up to the untoward hours, and subject her, consequently, to the ridicule and censure of others."

Of salutations, says this book, there are many different sorts. Among them are mentioned the method followed in foreign countries. "In Southern Africa it is the custom to rub toes. In Lapland your friend rubs his nose against yours. The Egyptian solicitedly asks you, 'How do you perspire?' The most familiar and affectionate form of salutation is the kiss," says this author. "It need scarcely be said that this is only proper on special occasions and between special parties."

Evidently this author held the view in common with most writers of his time, that women were of a decidedly inferior mental capacity and education. "In talking with ladies of ordinary education," he says, "avoid political, scientific or commercial topics, and choose only such subjects as are likely to be of interest to them." There is no objection voiced, to a conversation concerning the weather.

"Do not use a classical quotation in the presence of ladies without apologizing for, or translating it." A University man read this passage and advised, "Don't use 'em at all. If you translate it, she'll probably check you up on a technicality, if you don't, she'll do it herself and tell you you used it wrong."

A final word to the lady on the street in rainy weather. "When tripping over the pavement, a lady should gracefully raise her dress a little above her ankle. With her right hand she should hold together the folds of her gown and draw them toward the right side. To raise the dress on both sides (above the ankle) with both hands, is vulgar. This ungraceful practice can be tolerated only for a moment when the mud is very deep. Yet the modern girl says she is bound by convention!"

13 STATES PAY BONUSES

World War Veterans Are Receiving $191,339,200.

Cash bonuses totaling $191,339,200 are being paid to veterans of the World War in thirteen States and $156,000,000 more in "adjusted compensation" will be disbursed under legislation already passed, while many more millions are being spent in giving other aid to ex-service men. A nation-wide survey by the Bank of America shows that every State in the Union, excepting Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi, has passed legislation giving or authorizing aid for war veterans, either in the form of cash bonuses, monetary aid or relief, exemptions or other benefits. New York is the only State forced to abandon bonuses because of an adverse court decision.

FOURTH LAY SERVICE HELD

F. B. Mumford and F. F. Stephens

Talk at Methodist Education

"I am glad that neither education nor religion can be inherited," said Dean F. B. Mumford last night in speaking on "Christian Education" at the Broadway Methodist Church in the fourth of a series of six lay services.

"Both education and religion are acquired only through the energy and will of the individual," he continued. "Both have to do with the mind. Education is to dispel ignorance, to acquire knowledge; and knowledge is power." The man who lets someone else do his thinking for him is a menace.

"We want our children taught religion as efficiently as they are taught history or arithmetic. The Sunday school needs more time; an hour is not long enough. It is a bad thing to have good teachers in high school and poor teachers in Sunday school," he concluded.

Dr. F. F. Stephens, speaking on the subject, "Religious Foundations at Our State Institutions," followed. He outlined the development of institutions of higher learning in America and showed how all were church schools at first, with the development of state controlled schools to the highest point in the twentieth century.

"The student body in a university town changes every four years, making a great opportunity to service to the state here," he said. A great church plant is planned that will provide a home for all the church activities and be an aid to university students. "Is this service to the student worth while?" he asked. "If it is not, then no work of the church is worth while," he stated.

Prof. B. E. Miller, the lay leader of the series of services, announced that on next Sunday evening the service will be in charge of the Fayette District Epworth League which will be in session the latter part of the week here. The following Sunday, March 12, the final number of the series will be in charge of the choir under the direction of Henry Loudenback the church organist.
